SecurEnvoy launches SecureIdentity Data Loss Protection

SecurEnvoy, A Shearwater Group plc company is excited to announce the release of SecureIdentity Data Loss Protection; the latest offering in the company's signature SecureIdentity Platform.
The DLP and associated Data Discovery products are a significant extension to SecurEnvoy's portfolio. Known to many as an Identity Management provider, SecurEnvoy are now delivering on their broader strategy to safeguard user identities, devices, and corporate data with products that are relevant today, and future proofed for tomorrow.

The SecureIdentity DLP release is one of several major product releases expected from SecurEnvoy this financial year. The company has expanded development capabilities and implemented an agile coding methodology that will support the release of additional features for multiple products.

The company is also developing new patent-pending technology that differentiates it from other vendors. One example is SecurEnvoy's Intelligent Reporting Anomaly Detection (IRAD) that will disrupt the field of Identity Management and respond to the market challenges customers are currently facing.

Steve Watts, Chief Executive of SecurEnvoy, commented:
"SecureIdentity DLP pushes our agenda to provide holistic and future-proofed technology for our users, their devices, and data. This release delivers a tool that ensures you can discover, classify and protect your data – any data, any location, on any platform. It's a single-pane of glass showing a company's data at varying levels of sensitivity".

Phil Higgins, Group Chief Executive Officer of Shearwater Group plc, added:
"The Shearwater Group prides itself on building a portfolio of companies that are innovative yet also able to deliver – today – on security products that meet pressing market needs.

The DLP release from SecurEnvoy is a significant expansion of the company's capabilities in protecting data, which is for many companies the most valuable resource, and also promises further developments and opportunities for growth".
